Citibank Artrium Artwork, Canary Wharf

A stunning artwork installation designed by the internationally acclaimed artist Bridget Riley constructed in the atrium of the Citibank Building Canary Wharf, soaring 50m high and consisting of over 1000 multicoloured aluminium panels supported on over 50 tensioned stainless steel wires in three layers to form a three-dimensional array, the panels being attached with machined clamping blocks to the cables with access during construction from suspended cradles requiring meticulous control of delivery and loading of components to ensure the correct location of each of the different panel shapes in their appropriate custom-mixed colours and shades.
